John Cooper came to see me this morning. He is going home in a couple of days, and will run again for the Senate from Kentucky. He kindly left a present for Evangeline. He is a high-grade, attractive man, and I have great confidence in him.

Bob Terrill called me this afternoon, to say the Soviet Embassy had asked whether we would arrange to have Mr. Malik flown to Berlin tonight on an American plane. After discussion, and with considerable difficulty, we made the necessary dispositions, but then the Soviet Embassy called and said he had obtained other transportation.

Evangeline and I went down to Versailles and spent the night.
